

The FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections. Once I get home from work, I can now completely focus on my marriage and family without being interrupted by telemarketers. Indiana's Telephone Privacy law has given us so much more quiet time at home. I feel very privileged to live in a state that actually listens to the people and acts in their best interest. It is my right to have a phone that doesn't ring off the hook with rude, unfriendly telemarketers on the other end.
